For Release: Nov. 6, 2014

The Moles
PRESS RELEASE

TIMOTHY BARNARD AND RAYMOND R. ONEGLIA selected for Outstanding Achievement Awards by The Moles, a National Construction Organization.

Timothy Barnard, Chairman of the Board of Barnard Companies, Bozeman, Montana, and Raymond R. Oneglia, Vice Chairman of O&G Industries, Torrington, Connecticut, have been selected for top honors by The Moles, one of the industry’s foremost construction organizations. The awards will be presented at The Moles’ Annual Award dinner at the New York Hilton Hotel, on Wednesday, January 28, 2015. Barnard will receive the Moles Non-Member Award, and Oneglia will accept The Moles Member Award.

Starting his construction company in 1975, Barnard’s work ethic has allowed his original earthmoving and utility pipeline enterprise to expand significantly into a multi-million dollar heavy civil contractor that ranks 193rd among Engineering News-Record’s Top 400 U.S. Contractors. Barnard Companies specializes in risky, remote, complex projects. Barnard is currently serving as the managing partner of a joint venture with Impregilo and S.A. Healy for the construction of the $233 million twin TBM tunnel Central Subway Tunnel Project in San Francisco. Barnard studied at Villanova University and Gonzaga University and received an Honorary Doctorate, Lifetime Contributions to Education & Community, from Montana State University in 2011. He has served on the Gonzaga University Board of Trustees since 2000, and Oneglia will accept The Moles Member Award.

Oneglia earned his bachelor’s degree from Union College in 1970, and promptly returned to the family’s construction company, O&G Industries (“O&G”), where he began working in his teens. Spending the first ten years as general superintendent overseeing all of the company’s field operations, Oneglia became immersed in all aspects of the company’s operation. He was instrumental in the acquisition and development of several quarries and material yards that have made O&G Industries one of the most diversified construction companies in the northeast and a premier supplier of construction materials throughout the state of Connecticut. Oneglia proved successful in building relationships, enabling O&G to partner with West Coast construction companies Perini Corporation and Tutor-Saliba on several, very major projects on the national stage. In 2000, Oneglia became a member on the Tutor-Perini Board of Directors. Oneglia is a past President and past Trustee of The Moles; past Board Member of the Beavers; and past President of the Connecticut Road Builders Association.

CONTACT: Gerard J. Carty, Executive Director
The Moles, 577 Chestnut Ridge Rd., Woodcliff Lake, NJ 07677
201-930-1923; gcarty@themoles.net